

Periods can be unpredictable, but your washroom doesn't have to be.

Offering phs Pads on a Roll solution in your washroom bolsters your commitment to employee and customer well-being. This shame-free pull and go product ensures your washroom is consistently offering a private solution in a public space.

The dispenser is simple to install with a discreet locking mechanism. The consumable is replenished in the same way you would replace toilet roll with a design feature to prevent the roll emptying entirely onto the floor. The consumable pad is plant-based and individually wrapped for a hygienic experience.

Why is a product like this so important?

Creating period equality in the workplace fosters an inclusive and supportive culture, ensuring that all employees can perform at their best without the stigma or logistical challenges associated with being on your period.

Period equality in the workplace is not just a progressive step; it's a transformative strategy that supports colleagues who menstruate. Introducing this initiative in the workplace signifies that you're a company that cares about their people, cares about your social values and integrity when it comes to sustainability.

At phs, we believe everyone should have access to the period products they need.

Periods are a natural part of life, and they should never be a barrier to education, work, or overall well-being. Whether you're at school, college, university or a place of work - no one should ever feel compromised, ashamed or go without during their period.

Period inequality exists in the UK, and whilst period products are considered a basic need, a lot of people who menstruate can't access them.

Sometimes known as 'period poverty', awareness of this issue has been growing and evolving, with regional, national and global movements to help create period equality, so nobody is held back because of their period.
