

PROSTATE
CANCER UK

HELPING MEN LIVE WELL

Portsmouth F.C. becomes first Championship football club to provide male incontinence bins

Making history as the first Championship football club to join the BOG STANDARD Charter, and notably, the first football club in the UK to embrace this ground-breaking initiative.

In Portsmouth alone, almost 14,000 men could get prostate cancer, with urinary incontinence likely to be an issue for many of these men.

Portsmouth football club has taken on 10 bins, across the club's premises including fan washrooms and lounges, so that its supporters, staff and visiting away fans can dispose of their incontinence products with dignity behind the cubicle door. It has also taken on five vending machines which include male incontinence products and pads and has a long history in promoting awareness of prostate cancer. This means the club has achieved the Gold BOG STANDARD.

For men living with the effects of prostate cancer treatment or incontinence, the washroom should be a safe space.

That's why phs Group, in partnership with Prostate Cancer UK, have created the BOG STANDARD Charter, to encourage safe spaces for men and allow them to dispose of their incontinence waste with dignity – which will allow them to continue living their lives, free from embarrassment, shame or anxiety.

For more information, visit www.phs.co.uk/BACKINTHEGAME

